Introduction

The Constitution of the Republic of Poland declares in Art. 53 the right to freedom of conscience and religion, in spite of that, various forms of attacks against believers, places of worship and religious symbols caused by their religious affiliation, are being recorded in Poland. The presented report reveals 311 cases of violations of the right to religious freedom in Poland between 1 January to 31 December 2020, made public through the media and reported to the Information and Consultation Center of the Laboratory of Religious Freedom¹. They are divided into seven categories:

- I. Physical attacks on believers (the clergy and laity) – behaviors directly harmful to the highest good: human life or health, provided that they are accompanied by a religious context (the clergy, service attendees) and anti-religious motives are evident²;
- II. Destruction and insult of places of worship (churches, chapels, cemeteries)
- III. Destruction and insult of religious symbols and objects of religious worship (crosses, figures, images of saints) – acts of vandalism are eligible to the first type of behaviour (destruction), the second (insult) concerns destruction with the intention of insulting religious feelings; the type of offence also depends on the will of the perpetrator and the circumstances in which he acted;
- IV. Restrictions in professing faith in public (malicious interference with the performance of religious acts: prayer, liturgy) – an event preventing the public from pursuing religious freedom: someone does not allow the faithful into the church; raises a false alarm before the service, and so on. Infringements in the form of restrictions on the profession of faith in public may be combined with an act of destruction or insult, nonetheless, these elements do not need to occur;

¹ The name of the Information and Consultation Center of the Laboratory of Religious Freedom. Later in the report, it will be quoted by the abbreviation: ICC.

² Classification I. also includes cases of robbery without a religious motive, however, only in cases when the frequency of attacks is so high that this type of robberies are beginning to cause fear of meeting religious needs freely, within given circumstances.

- V. Discrimination due to religious beliefs (restrictions of rights because of professed faith)
– situations where people are deprived of their ordinary rights or constrained in them on account of their religious affiliation (in matters of contracts or employment relationships etc.);
- VI. Incitement to hatred on the grounds of religious differences or insult of a population group or some person because of their religious affiliation – non-physical attacks on believers (individual or on a group of people): hate speech or insult of persons on the basis of their religious affiliation (offensive words, incitement to hatred);
- VII. Other – cases which do not classify with the other categories of acts.

The violations recorded in the report were collected by monitoring media reports: systematic reviews of websites, instant messengers and social networks in line with the adopted methodology, or have been reported to the ICC via application forms or e-mail messages. The first research stage consisted in adopting information about the given act, verifying the event as an act going against religious freedom and confirming the authenticity of the report in at least two sources³. Thereafter, complementing data on the perpetrators and the legal consequences imposed on them, provided that such were available in the media space. The final step consisted in cataloging the act according to the adopted categorization and creating a complete metric of the case, presented in tabular form, containing the following data:

1. Title
2. Date⁴
3. Image

³ In the case of media monitoring, these criteria are met provided that: 1) two independent press sources, instant messengers or posts from social networks, are obtained; or by 2) obtaining a single press source, instant messenger or social media post and verifying this source by contacting people or institutions related to the act (including the perpetrator, the injured party, the parish, the office responsible for the care of the cult object – e.g. a monument). The classification of the act notified to the ICC in the report takes place after the verification of the source of information and through contact with people or institutions related to the verified act (including the perpetrator, the injured party, the parish, the office responsible for the care of the cult object – e.g. a monument). Information on the basis of a photo showing the suffered damage is also verified as a confirmed violation, provided that the date of the event is affirmed by at least one media or institutional source (by the curia, parish, religious association, the Town Hall, etc.).

⁴ In case of lack of information on the incident date, the date of the publication of the information has been recorded.

Conclusions

a. Statistical and comparative conclusions: Poland in 2019-2020

b. Wnioski porównawcze: świat i Europa w roku 2020

a. Statistical and comparative conclusions: Poland in 2019-2020⁸

1. From 1 January to 31 December 2020, based on media reports – 311 violations of the right to freedom of conscience and religion against institutions and believers in Poland were recorded: 11 physical attacks on the clergy and lay people, 163 acts of destruction and insult of places of worship, 55 cases of destruction and insult of religious symbols and objects of religious worship, 15 events with the features of restricting profession of faith in public, 3 cases of discrimination based on religious beliefs, 56 incidents with broadly defined features of incitement to hatred on the basis of religious differences or insult of a population group or some person because of their religious affiliation and 7 other anti-religiously motivated infringements. These cases are a manifestation of hostility towards religion, although they do not reflect the real scale of violations against the freedom of religion and conscience in Poland, due to the fact that the report does not cover incidents that are not described in the media (such as those taking place in public space towards individuals in their work places or everyday life environments or acts not reported to the Police or the Prosecutor's Office).

2. The above analysis indicates an increase in the cases of violations of the right to religious freedom in Poland in 2020 (311 cases in total) compared to 2019 (72 cases in total), which, among others, is due to the escalation of anti-religious acts following the ruling of the Constitutional Tribunal on eugenic abortion (on 22-31 October, 141 attacks were reported against the Roman Catholic Church, during the so-called National Women's Strike). This tendency was also noticeable before 22 October, although at a lesser intensity (110 cases were reported between 1 January and 21 October 2020, that is 38 cases more than through entire 2019).
3. The proportion of incidents in the following categories: Incitement to hatred on the basis of religious differences or insult of a population group or some person because of their religious affiliation (an increase by 6.9 % compared to 2019) increased significantly in 2020. Within this group of acts, there appeared acts of violations which did not take place in the public space in the previous year, that is, public incitement to commit a crime, for instance, setting fire to a church, disruption of the celebration of holy masses.
4. The most numerous group of violations of the right to freedom of religion in 2020, as in 2019, were the acts of vandalism against places of worship (cathedrals, sanctuaries, churches, cemeteries and wayside shrines). The variety of forms of persecution in this category included: profanation (placing offensive and vulgar inscriptions or satanic symbols), devastation, partial destruction of property, burglary and theft.
5. 92.61 % of the recorded violations of the right to freedom of religion in Poland in 2020 concerned events against the Catholic religion (288 cases). Orthodox Christians (3 cases), Lutherans (1 case) and followers of Judaism (5 case) and Islam (1 case) were also victims of the attacks because of their faith. With regard to 13 cases, the violations concerned shared values of all Christians, that is, insult of the cross or acts of vandalism committed on the grounds of the necropolis.
6. The data obtained from the research on the gender and age of the perpetrators are not reliable: in the vast majority of cases, no data have been provided in this area.
7. Incidents reported to the Police or the Public Prosecutor's Office constituted 45.66 % of all cases included in the report. 3.21 % of the infringement acts were not reported to the Police or the Prosecutor's Office. No information on the state of the proceedings was provided on 51.13 % of the data in public media. These data raise questions about the effectiveness of criminal proceedings regarding the respect of the right to freedom of religion and conscience in Poland, and the level of awareness amongst the victims of their rights and forms of protection.

8. In accordance to media reports⁹ as of 26 November 2020 it appears that, according to the information of the Chief Commander of the Police sent to the Ombudsman, the police conducted a total of 88 proceedings in connection with incidents in churches after the judgment of the Constitutional Tribunal on eugenic abortion, of which: 74 proceedings concerned the destruction and insult of sacred buildings and objects of religious worship; 14 proceedings against crimes of interference with religious acts. It was specified that 12 violations referred to the interference with the performance of religious acts, one proceeding was initiated for insulting a priest and other people attending the service, and bodily harm during an attempted intrusion into the church. As the Police informed, 10 cases have already been submitted to the Prosecutor's Office.
9. Voivodeships with the highest number of infringements during 2020:
 - a. Masovian voivodeship – 56 acts (18.01 %)
 - b. Lesser Poland voivodeship – 42 acts (13.51 %)
 - c. Silesian voivodeship – 36 acts (11.58 %)
10. The analysis of media reports shows that attacks against Christians because of their religious affiliation generate social tensions, cause anxiety in local communities, create a sense of danger and non-acceptance because of their religious affiliation and the willingness of manifesting it.

b. Comparative conclusions: the world and Europe in 2020

Violations of the right to freedom of conscience and religion

worldwide and in Europe in 2020

Causes, tendencies and forms

In 2020, as the world grappled with the SARS-CoV-2 virus epidemic, there has been an unprecedented increase in persecution, discrimination and intolerance on the basis of religion or religious beliefs worldwide. The measurability and dedication of the full picture of this social phenomenon is always significantly limited, therefore the obtained data are estimates and do not fully reflect the scale of violations against religious freedom. It is influenced not only by the very nature of the phenomenon and the offences against believers, often veiled and carefully hidden, but also by the difficulties in obtaining complete and reliable data on this subject, as the victims themselves – for fear of reprisals and under the influence of national authorities of individual countries downplaying this problem – they are not willing to report violations of their civil liberties to local judicial authorities. Social restrictions introduced by state governments to counter the spread of the epidemic of the dangerous pathogen have adversely affected the possibility of exercising the right to freedom of religion, including worship and meeting spiritual and religious needs in almost every corner of the world. This has revealed a dangerous trend towards marginalization and postponement of the spiritual realm and religious values in many contemporary societies.

The fundamental human right to freedom of belief, conscience and religion is not subject to derogation by any positive-law instance, but only in certain very precisely defined circumstances, its full exercise may be temporarily limited due to a factor threatening the general public. Respect for this right and the protection of civil liberties related to the worldview and religious sphere appears to be one of the greatest challenges of the modern world in all latitudes. As shown in the data from last year, Poland is also faced with the necessity of protecting this civil freedom against the disturbing tendency of more frequent and audacious violations of this right as well as insult against the religious feelings of believers – on the part of private and collective entities that usurp their prerogatives, that do not belong to them. Hence, the presentation of the main causes, tendencies and forms of violations of the right to freedom of conscience and religion on a global scale and in the European context, which is closer to us, will allow us to capture the nature and dynamics of these violations in the Republic of Poland in the corresponding period more easily.¹⁰

Global Situation: World Persecution Index

Monitoring in terms of respect for the right to religious freedom is conducted by several organizations (governmental and non-governmental) with an international, continental or national scope.¹¹ They examine the scale of respect for civil liberties in the religious field and the impact of state policy on the freedom to choose and practice religion in several spaces, such as private life and the public sphere, as well as freedom of the functioning of religious associations or the use of physical violence against believers. With regard to Christians, the most persecuted religious group, the Open Doors organization updates the World Persecution Index, which operates relative values (percentage and indicator) based on the data obtained each year, taking into account the ratio of the population of members of a given religion to the total number of citizens of the country. In estimated absolute numbers for Christianity alone, there has been a significant increase in cases of persecutions due to faith in the last research period, from around 260 million in 2019 to around 309 million in 2020.

North Korea

For the past twenty years, North Korea has consistently ranked first in terms of disrespect of freedom of conscience and blatant religious intolerance. Violations of the right to freedom of conscience take the form of extreme violence in this country. The mere disclosure of belonging to the Church results in a ruthless death sentence, which is extended to family members. In many cases, believers become sentenced to harsh imprisonment or exhausting labor camps sooner. They are not entitled to a fair and independent judgment. Torture, sexual violence and psychological repression are common. Furthermore, the authority apparatus through its secret services, extends repressive measures against its own citizens who managed to leave the state territory. The main cause of the persecutions is the atheistic worldview of state leaders based on the doctrine of Marxism and radical communism.

¹⁰The description includes all religions and denominations, with particular emphasis on Christianity, whose followers, according to all independent reports, are the most persecuted group in the world because of their religious worldview.

Muslim countries

Radical Islamist Afghanistan is situated just behind communist North Korea. This country does not allow the practice of any religion other than Islam: this carries an absolute death penalty – in the so-called "Honor killing" for betraying the native religion. The early rendition of young women to Muslims is common in order to ensure the maintenance of the same religion in the nation. Moreover, converts are subjected to torture, other forms of physical violence, financial and property repression and social ostracism. Converts are frequently forced to participate in public Islamist practices. The kidnapping of the main breadwinners is also used to exert economic coercion on the entire community and force it to return to the bosom of Islam. The reason for religious intolerance is the close link between the socio-state system and the radical interpretation of Islam, made and maintained by the ruling Taliban party. This results in a theocratic concept of a state where all non-Muslims are considered enemies. Similar attitudes, although to a lesser extent, are observed in Pakistan, which, when applying religious law, resorts relatively easily to accusations of blasphemy in the case of members of other religions.

Radical Islamism is also the reason why freedom of conscience and religion are not respected in many African countries, among which Somalia, Libya, Eritrea and Nigeria are the prominent. The imposition of Sharia law in these countries involves the use of the most brutal forms of violence. This phenomenon is intensified by the existence of a clan structure in African societies and the existence of Islamic terrorist organizations (Daesh, al-Shabab, Hausa-Fulani, Boko Haram, ISWAP), whose methods of operation include murder, arson of houses and sacred buildings, kidnapping of entire non-Islamic groups, rape of women and children, and forced marriages with Muslims by adolescent women. Men, on the other hand, are forced into polygamy, are being publicly humiliated or placed in Islamist centers where they are forcibly indoctrinated. There is no freedom of speech, and the judiciary is extremely discriminatory against non-Muslim citizens. In Eritrea, the state controls all spheres of life of the non-Muslim, and women conscripted into the military fall victim to forced conversion to Islam and experience cruel sexual violence. The privileging of non-Islamic religious unions under surveillance and infiltrated by the authorities creates an appearance of tolerance on part of the authorities, and in fact is a tool of repression for members of communities operating in an unofficial manner and practicing their faith in the underground. Nigeria, on the other hand, is the African country with the highest number of murders on the basis of religion: mainly men are the targets of Islamic terrorists, while women are converted to Islam by being forced to marry Muslims, often preceded by rape. Last year, in addition to the above-mentioned countries, terrorist actions by

Islamist organizations in Mozambique took a bloody toll, claiming the lives of hundreds of Christians.¹²

A separate case is India, which is among the top ten countries with the highest degree of religious intolerance, where radical followers of Hinduism and Buddhism, which are the majority religions there, demonstrate extremely negative attitudes towards members of other religions. The caste system and drastic social disproportions intensify discrimination and the usage of the full rights of persons who are not followers of Hinduism or Buddhism. These trends were clearly visible during the pandemic, when, for example, Christians were suffering from hunger because they were omitted from the distribution of government aid.

The circle of Western civilization

Although it might seem that the culture of tolerance and religious pluralism based on freedom of conscience is a long-accomplished stage of socio-political evolution in the Western world, empirical data contradict this rash assertion. Discrimination and intolerance mainly concern Christians, to a lesser extent the followers of Judaism, and recently – in response to Islamic fundamentalism – also Muslims feel social pressure and the generalized negative attitude of the authorities of some countries.

In the countries of Latin and South America, under the influence of the so-called Historical revisionism, accompanied by the doctrine of secularism and laicism as the only correct model of social relations, prejudices against religious institutions, often caused by moral scandals within the very church institutions and the life of Latin Christians, becomes harder and harder. This has been particularly evident in recent years in Colombia, where the presence of drug cartels and paramilitary groups (guerillas) is facing resistance and opposition from Christian communities. Their members are victims of murder, kidnapping, torture, resettlement and even human trafficking, not to mention financial repression and sexual abuse. The anti-Christian attitude of the indigenous Indian tribes is also noteworthy, which – based on a historical reinterpretation of American evangelization, emphasizes the superiority of pre-Columbian religious beliefs and cults (animism and shamanism), stigmatizing, harassing and discriminating against members of their own tribal community who make different religious choices.¹³

¹³<https://olire.org/es/monitorear/informes-del-pais/colombia/> (Accessed: 22/12/2020).

In Mexico it is drug trafficking, organized crime, a reactionary revival of pre-Christian beliefs and progressive secularism – with its roots in the communist movement strongly present in the history of this country – that provide the basis for intolerance, discrimination and even bloody persecution of believers. In the public and legislative spheres, the rejection of Christian ethics and accusations of fanaticism directed at religious people are evident. The efforts of those in power in building ideological pluralism in the society do not withstand the clash with drug gangs and the discourse of political correctness, according to which every manifestation of religiosity is stigmatized and religious neutrality is strongly promoted as a required social attitude.

The European continent

The secular trend, which is the legacy of the French Revolution and the European Enlightenment, and the promoted scientific-liberal worldview, contribute to the strengthening of attitudes unfavorable to believers in European societies. This happens despite the officially binding legal norms of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the fundamental laws of most countries of the Old Continent, which have internally ratified this document and adapted their own legislation on religious law into line with it. In parts of Europe, attitudes of religious intolerance are the aftermath of totalitarian state systems and socio-political doctrines that until recently were officially upheld by the authorities of certain European countries.

The religious structure of modern Europe has undergone an extremely dynamic transformation in recent decades. This is influenced by many factors: the aging of traditionally Christian societies, the influx of immigrants with different, often radicalizing religious views and difficulties with their socio-cultural assimilation, the promotion of secularism as the most appropriate paradigm for the relation between authorities and religious associations, and secularism as the dominant and proper worldview. The moral scandals within the religious and church institutions themselves undoubtedly contribute to this. However, the main reason for that is the ideological dispute over worldview in which the parties themselves, often demanding tolerance and respect for their own choices, behavior and lifestyle, prevent believers from exercising their constitutional rights. In many countries there is a strong interference of state bodies in the sphere of family life, through restrictions on the rights of parents in raising and shaping the ethical attitudes of their children in accordance with their own convictions; imposing ideas and standards of behavior and education, and restricting the freedom to express one's own religious beliefs and practice worship. The ideology of neo-Marxism and militant communism, with particular reference to militant feminism, which in a simplistic manner attributes a negative influence to religion on social life and the social status of women, openly inciting violence against religious institutions, religious communities and their individual members – is not without significance for the respect of freedom of conscience and religion.

Persecution is taking an increasingly open, audacious and aggressive form, despite the fundamentally different motivations of anti-religious attitudes in the societies of the Western civilization compared to Asian and African countries. On the European continent in 2020, there were murders, kidnappings, physical aggression, psychological violence motivated by the religious condition of the believers, and disruption or prevention of public celebration of religious rites, destruction of religious property, including arson attacks on churches, devastation of religious necropolises, as well as numerous profanations of the sacraments and symbols of religious worship. There were also more situations where religious people were stigmatized and discriminated against in the media and public space, and more cases of insulting religious feelings and hate speech. Among the European countries where believers experience the greatest difficulties in exercising their right to freely profess and practice their faith are: Russia¹⁴ (where Jehovah's Witnesses are persecuted and numerous arrests are made), France (cultivating secularism as an official civic attitude, struggling with Islamic fundamentalism and introducing liberal legislation on the protection of life and the functioning of the family, significantly interfering with the domain of education and shaping ethical attitudes in the school system by blocking freedom of speech and minimizing the presence of believers in the public space, which is also the scenery of cruel murders on religious grounds)¹⁵ and Spain¹⁶ (where the leftist-communist government introduces changes to the education system and adapts family and bioethical legislation to its worldview). In all latitudes, the duration of the pandemic has revealed a deepening and increasing tendency to restrict the right to religious freedom in the exercise of worship, and in many cases, abuse by those in authority in applying and prolonging restrictions on the free practice of religious faith.
